WILSON LAUDS RICH IN REPUBLISHED BOOK

"When a Man Comes to Himself" Attracts Much Attention Because of Opinions.

NEW YORK, March 16.—Republished here in new form, President Woodrow Wilson's book, "When a Man Comes to Himself," is attracting much attention today because of certain opinions expressed therein and also because of the laudation of an unidentified, influential philanthropist. That not all industrial leaders are engrossed in amassing great wealth is one statement. It is a typically Wilsonian volume. Some men "find" themselves later in life than others, the volume declares.

"It is a mistake to suppose that the captains of industry are engrossed in vulgar pursuit of wealth," the President declares. "Too often they suffer the vulgarity of wealth to display itself in the idleness and ostentation of their wives and children."

"The masters of industry are often too busy with their own sober and momentous calling to have time or spare thought enough to govern their own households."

"These men are not fascinated by the glitter of gold. The appetite of power has got hold of them. Business is more interesting than pleasure."

"It was this fascination that got hold upon the faculties of the man whom the world was afterward to know, not as a prince among merchants, but as a prince among benefactors. Benevolence was a sort of sublimated business. He had come to himself."

"It is the discovery of what they cannot do that transforms reformers into statesmen; no statesman dreams of doing whatever he pleases."

The book is copyrighted by Harper Brothers.

Who was the "unidentified millionaire philanthropist" he praised in "When a Man Comes to Himself," the book his New York publisher says just getting out for him, President Wilson was asked today.

His questioners failed to find out. It isn't a new book, the President said. He wrote it so many years ago—twelve or fifteen. It was understood that he couldn't remember who the "philanthropist" was. All his books are being republished, he added, and this is one of them.

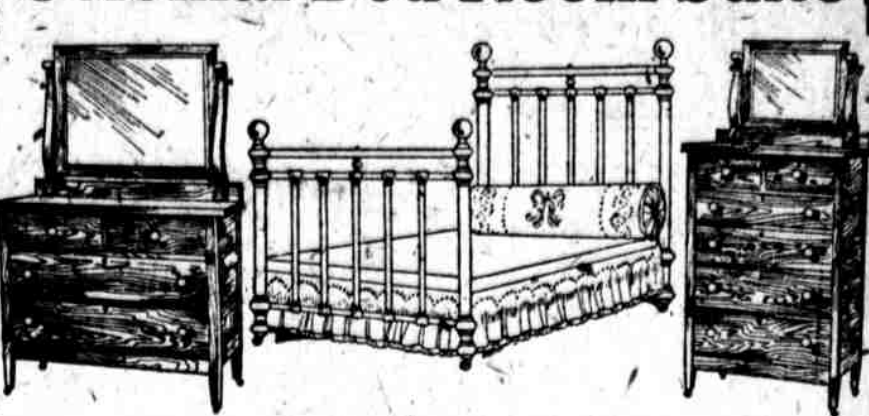

Woman in Coffin She Treasured for Years

CANTON, Ohio, March 16.—Margaret Kintz, seventy-eight, died at the county infirmary of a broken neck suffered in a fall. Since she was eight years old she had been an inmate of the same institution.

When she died infirmary officials went to the store room of the institution and brought out a coffin which had been kept there the last few years awaiting her death. It was given her by a friend and was her most treasured possession.

Useful.
"What kind of work could you possibly do around an office?"
"I'm a kind of all-around handy man, mister. I kin hold a door open, light a match for ye, look out an' see if it's rainin', call a taxi, drop letters down the chute, an' tell folks yer' out when ye ain't."—Life.

Women's Suits in the New Spring Styles, Designs and Materials

Greater in Variety Than Any Previous Season

Suits for every occasion and every woman—on every side we see suits that are actually different—not merely varied. This season there seems to have been a suspension of the rigid laws governing suit fashions of a clearly defined character. Every Suit is wearable, becoming and beautiful.

Silk Faille Suits, Dressy Suits, Semi-Dress Suits, Tailleur Suits, Afternoon Suits, Mourning Suits, Sports Suits, Tailored Suits, Semi-tailored Suits, Cross Country Suits, Meadowbrook Suits, Prince Chap Suits.

THE MATERIALS—Mostly ribbed and of that "new-old-fashioned" type, such as silk failles, silk poplins, imported gabardine, wool poplin, men's wear serge, shepherd checks, English tweeds, Scotch homespuns, and novelty cloths.

SHADES—Give the neutral tones the preference, such as Holland blue, Belgian blue, Newport sand, battle-ship gray, Tuxedo brown, navy, putty, green, wistaria, black-and-white and a good representation of fancies.

They have all the smart style touches of the season in buttons, braids and self-made ornaments.

The variedness in skirts is marked, so that a suit may have a skirt of great width, medium flare or circular; some have yokes, plaits at sides or back, small or large.

Pockets are essential to coats and skirts; patch pockets, set-in pockets, braid-trimmed pockets, button-trimmed pockets, flap pockets.

Of especial interest are the belts. Made of both the bright and the suede leathers and self materials; some finished with pockets or buttons, or both; a clever combination belt is in blue and white, with silver buttons. Never were buttons so freely used; self-covered; plain and fancy; bone in flat and bullet shapes. Buttons extending from neck of coat to the hem of skirt; others in clusters on skirts, some attractively used on the new flare cuffs.

There is so much to be seen in the new styles that the only way one can become properly acquainted as to the variedness and beauty is to inspect them.
